

Help Moms With RA

Pregnancy and rheumatoid arthritis discoveries are not possible without volunteers like you.

MotherToBaby is currently enrolling pregnant women in an observational study to explore how rheumatoid arthritis (RA) and its treatment affect pregnancy. All studies are conducted through phone interviews. Participants will not be asked to take or change any medications, travel, or make any changes to their current health routines. If you've have RA and are pregnant, you may qualify for this important study.

"There is a huge need to generate more data for all of the drugs that pregnant women need to take."
